Excerpt: . . . and pleasure is the education of their children. I could name a number;-- the Duke Verdura, the Prince Partana, the Count Buscemi, and many others, who live in the most sacred union. Such sights are very rare on the continent. But indeed the style that young people zre brought up in here, seems to lay a much more solid foundation for matrimonial happiness, than either in France or Italy. The young ladies are not shut up in convents till the day of their marriage, but for the most part live in the house with their parents, where they receive their education, and are every day in company with their friends and relations. From what I can observe, I think they are allowed almost as much liberty as with us. In their great assemblies we often see a club of young people (of both sexes) get together in a corner, and amuse themselves for hours, at cross purposes or such likegames, without the mothers being under the least anxiety; indeed, we sometimes join in these little parties, and find them extremely entertaining. In general, they are quick and lively, and have a number of those jtux desfirit, which, I think, must ever be a proof, in all countries, of the familiar intercourse betwixt the ycung people of the two sexes; for all these games are insipid, if they are not seasoned bv something of that invisible and subtile agency, which renders every thing more interesting in...
